9 GI Spotlight: Dharwad Pedha

The historical origins of Dharwad Pedha is linked to the Thakur family which migrated from Unnao in Uttar Pradesh to Dharwad subsequent to the dreaded plague that engulfed in the late 18th century. Dharwad Pedha is a unique type of sweet meat, brown in colour, made of milk processed from buffaloes reared in and around the GI mapped region. Special emphasis is given to quality and production during the preparation of the special sweet topped with 'khoa' along with sugar. Its distinctiveness lies in being a hand made preparation, without the use of any preservatives or flavouring agents, boasts of a longer shelf like than other milk made sweets, does not perish easily and remains fresh for a period of 20 days. The sweet has gained accreditation and is famed for its rich quality and unique taste.

10 GI Artisan Corner

Meet Sanjay Mishra, the proud owner of Tru Mishras and the first Authorised User of the country's and State's first GI registered in the Food Stuffs segment! For someone whose ancestral history and roots were so closely connected with Dharwad Pedha, Sanjay was determined to carry forward the family legacy passionately to retain the delicacy's authenticity. He reminisces that having grown up inside this ecosystem, the product itself was woven in their identity. It felt like carrying forward a cultural responsibility, having grown up "around the aroma of milk simmering for hours and the discipline of traditional sweet making."

While he forayed different roles/verticals across travel, creative fields and entrepreneurship in his professional trajectory, the urge to contribute to the State's heritage product was extremely strong. The initial nuggets of experience, he believes, certainly helped shape his perspective about branding, packaging, marketing and modernising a traditional product. As a result, when he plunged into the family business of Dharwad Pedha, he was able to infuse fresh gleanings and global exposure. Being a GI tagged product with its uniqueness in the region, spurred him to elevate the ecosystem around the product and blend tradition with modern packaging and technology. Hence due to conscious and concerted efforts, he expanded production capacity, improved hygiene standards, safeguarded standards with adherence to quality and traditional methods, digitalised processes and enhanced shelf life of the product, which paid off extremely well. As a result, Tru Mishras have catered to and nurtured their clientele base across local customers, travellers, retail chains and pan-India clients through courier and online platforms.

Sanjay prides that what is more heartening is that younger customers appreciate the authenticity of the product and as a legacy, his family has been able to spread joy to thousands of people across the country. Sanjay was also sharp to leverage the tremendous export potential for the special Dharwad Pedha, by improving shelf life and attractive packaging technology and has been exporting it to countries in the Middle East (Dubai, Qatar, Oman) and markets with Indian diaspora. However, amidst the milestones carved, there were challenges as well to encounter in the journey, he recalls. COVID in particular brought in its train massive disruptions with supply chain, labour bottlenecks and ambiguity in retail sales. Given a transient shelf-life of the product, production planning also posed a threat. However, these challenges provided stimulus to innovate, revisit marketing, branding and social media strategies and strengthen procurement and manpower chain. Tru Mishras have been recognised for their sustained efforts towards best practice benchmarks and have been conferred with prestigious awards from few media companies.

With the growing awareness about traditional foods, Sanjay envisages a buoyant future for the GI tagged Dharwad Pedha and believes that the younger generation could be dynamic brand ambassadors for preserving and upscaling the business even as he moves ahead in his pursuit of excellence and enhancing brand visibility. In sum, Sanjay opines that Dharwad Pedha is not just a sweet, but a legacy that mirrors the cultural ethos of the people in the region.
